Finalist project of the Global Junior Challenge 2012 for the category "until to age 15." The objective, pursued by a florentine school from Le Piagge district, in collaboration with researchers, educators and media educators, was to explore the use of new media for educational purposes. The activities involving children, including many of the second generation, in the creation of a digital storytelling laboratory, realized with smartphones and social networks: the participants were asked to describe with photos and videos their lives in the neighborhood, to create a collective facebook account and to take for the media contents. From all this, were born real-life stories, but also fantasy stories written using the digital communication platforms: sms and Facebook Mobile service. The stories have taken shape in a collective way and in real time, essentially by passing from one to another a mobile phone.
